Kim Moses is a principal in Sander/Moses Productions where she has both developed and served as an executive producer on over 300 hours of prime-time television programming.

Moses is currently the executive producer and director of the hit CBS drama “Ghost Whisperer” and she has co-authored the show’s companion book, “Ghost Whisperer: Spirit Guide.” She has also co-created and written the award winning “Ghost Whisperer: The Other Side” webseries, which is now in its third installment: The Other Side III. <http://www.cbs.com/ghost>

Kim has co-created (with Ian Sander) the Total Engagement Experience, a new business and creative model for television, which uses the television show as a component of a broader multi-platform entertainment experience that includes the Internet, publishing, music, mobile, DVD’s, video games and more, establishing an infinity loop driving ratings and increasing revenue streams.

“Ghost Whisperer’s” fifth season will premiere on Friday, September 25 at 8 P.M. ET/PT on CBS. “Ghost Whisperer” is a Sander/Moses production in association with ABC Studios and for the CBS Television Studios Network.

Kim’s other television executive producer credits include “Profiler,” for which she co-wrote and directed episodes, as well as “The Beast,” “New York News,” “Brimstone” and “For The People.”

Among her television movie executive producer credits are “Ali, An American Hero,” the Emmy Award-winning “Stolen Babies,” “Chasing the Dragon” and “How to Marry a Billionaire.” Additional feature film script writing credits include “The Surgeon” and “Home of Champions.”

For the past 10 years, Moses has created and produced entertainment event programming for the Internet, including “Confessions of a Desperate Housewife” for ABC.com, and Electronic Entertainment Expo Internet events for UGO.com (the 7th most successful fantasy/entertainment Web site in the world—demographic: males aged 16-34).

Her earliest television producing credits include the reality series “How’d They Do That!” on CBS, “Comic Strip Live Primetime” and “My World On Video,” the reality special “The Extreme Edge,” as well as the sports reality series “Power Boat Racing With Don Johnson.” She has also served as a producer on the MTV Music Awards I & II, The Emmy Awards, the CBS live music special “Super Bowl Saturday Night,” the live music special “Walt Disney’s 4th of July Spectacular” and the music special “Disney’s Christmas on Ice.”

Moses began her career in television at Ohlmeyer Productions where she developed reality-based programs, game shows, and rock & roll and sports programs, specializing in live broadcasts. She also worked on Capitol Hill on the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Science and Technology, for ABC Sports and the National Football League.

Along with Ian Sander, Kim produced "Hollywood and Civil Rights: Destination Freedom", a live Event for the Democratic National Committee during the 2000 Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles.

In 2008, Moses was a member of Newsweek's Women and Leadership Advisory Committee. She also spoke on a Convergence Culture Consortium panel at MIT and the Professional Business Women of California's Conference in San Francisco in May. Moses and Ian Sander participated in a panel on Episodic TV: Elements of a Hit at the Produced By Conference in 2009.

Kim is married to Ian Sander, and they have two children, Aaron and Declan.
